Tollettes Worn by Fashionable Hostesses

A new way of wearing real flowers, which has a good effect, is to arrange them in a long, graduated trail from throat to waist, and fix them to one side of a bodice, which has a full vest and trimming down the oppo-site side. This is a popular style at weddings (the bride and bride maids sometimes wearing them), and at full dress entertainments by night and day. The fullest part is near the throat, and it tapers very much. Anside of the waist, just out of reach of the

The Daily Sponge Bath. Many people miss a great source of enjoyment and health in not taking a sponge bath daily in warm weather. For persons in vigorous health the proper time is immediately on rising in the morning, but for weak porsons and the aged the middle of the foreoon is better. Only the very robust are benefited by cold baths. For most, cool, topid or slightly warm water is better. After a day of heat and dust, and especially of hard work, cleanliness is secured and re-

This was a passenger boat named the one or two evening fetes the ladies' dresses, the style of furniture and gardens were pat-terned after the modes of the last century, at Wright, and was dragged by a single horse. The work completed, the city of New York and Boucher; even the wax candles in the was naturally selected as the most suitable morning of the 26th of October, 1825, the first flotilla of canal boats left Buffalo for New York, where the intelligence of its de-parture was received one hour and twenty minutes after, by the sound of cannon stationed along the line. The answer was returned in the same time; and thus in less than three hours Buffalo had spoken to New York and received a reply.

On the 4th of November the fleet, consisting of the Chancellor Livingston, in which were Clinton and his party, with a long line of canal packet boats in tow, arrived at New York and anchored near the state prison at Greenwich, amid the ringing of bells and the salutes of artillery. A grand naval pro-c. ssion was formed of all the vessels in port. Fireworks were set off in the park after a procession on shore. Strong Maritime Powers.

Great Britain still has the largest navy, ough she is closely pushed by France and Italy. She has one vessel carrying two 110thirty-six inches of iron: four vessels with sixteen 68-ton guns, one with four 80-ton guns, five with sixteen 43-ton guns, and numrous other vessels. She has eleven seagoing vessels carrying from twenty to thirty inches of armor. France is her most formidable antagonist, with nine seagoing vessels with armor from twenty to thirty inches thick, and six with armor from eight to sixteen inches thick. She has on six vessels fourteen 5-ton guns that can penetrate twenty-seven inches of iron, on one vessel two 52-ton guns that can pierce twenty-five inches of iron, and on six vessels nineteen 48-ton guns that can pierce twenty inches of iron. Italy is a close third. She has five seagoing vessels carrying twenty 103-ton guns that can pierce thirty-two mehes of armor and two with eight 101-ton guns that can pierce twentyeight inches of armor. Seven of her vessels carry armor from twenty to thirty inches So, though Great Britain has the strongest navy alone, she has a bad show against France and Italy combined. The United States doubtless has the smallest navy of any nation of any size. Even when our 'new navy" is finished it will not compare in tonnage, in armor, in speed or in guns with the navies of the great European
